My Dear Father and Mother is a collection of Clinard family letters written from 1871 to 1880. The correspondence, compiled by Karen L. Clinard and Richard Russell, will soon appear in form from Reminiscing Books of Asheville. A copy, which will be placed in the Rhodes Room of the Catawba County Library in Newton, should be on every local historian's shelf. The is based on the L. N. Clinard Papers, letters written to Livingston Clinard, a merchant of Salem, N.C., which are now on file at the state archives in Raleigh. The transports readers to Victorian America, when a letter was a welcome gift, much anticipated and thoughtfully relished. True to history, most of the original spelling and grammar was retained by the Clinard compilers, who no doubt had a mammoth undertaking, organizing and transcribing these handwritten gems. Naturally, this is organized in the epistolary fashion, a technique used by the likes of Vladimir Nabokov, C.S. Lewis and Lee Smith, among others. This is not to say that every letter...
