WHAT HAS BEEN DONE: By The Board And Its Secretary. A report of what has been done which embraced no statement of the individual action of the members of this Board, would seem to be incomplete; yet a single allusion to the nature of the service they have rendered, is all that I deem necessary. The law imposes upon them arduous duties, for the performance of which it provides no compensation. This feature in the law, although it enables the State to speculate upon the philanthropy of a portion of its citizens, is not an objectionable one. It divests the office of all attractions for those who seek office for pecuniary gain, and thereby secures the services of those only who are actuated by higher motives. Sundered as it now is, and as it is hoped it ever will...
