We have seen above that, by bringing about the fatigue of certain sets of nerves, we can produce an image of an object in a different colour to that it originally represented. These colours are sometimes known as subjective colours, and we can produce them in various ways. For instance, sssssssss 8888888888 Fig. 63. if a disc of card is painted in alternate black and white sectors, and placed upon the rotating machine and rotated--or black painted upon a white ground--on rotating, the resulting disc will, after a short time, acquire a certain colour according to the speed of rotation; thus a slow rate gives rise to the production of a green hue, while an increase in the rate of revolution changes it to a rose colour. Eood describes a method of observing these subjective colours by viewing the sky through a revolving disc with sectors; with a slow rate of revolution the sky has a red tint, with a higher rate of revolution a bluish-green tint was obtained in the centre, the outer portion being purple. The passage of a current or shock of electricity through the eye gives rise to the production of subjective colours, which vary with different persons; while persons who have partaken of santonihe see white objects in various colours, the violet end of the spectrum being invisible to them. Colour Blindness.--Many persons are deficient in colour sense....
